The objective is to have the following (or something similar to): That's the logic that I'm trying to apply to every page served by a custom route in a Laravel framework. However, I am currently getting a meta tag on every page rendered (that can be directly accessed through a URL) and not on every page served by a custom route. I found that I can even pull that date in by doing the following (again, on every page directly accessible through a URL): window.document.location.href; ...and what I get is the current page URL with the path-structure removed. If I copy/paste that URL I get the correct meta tag. I can also do a conditional statement that checks whether the page is served by a custom route and that seems to work fine, too. I should also mention that this is

What's New In What-U-Hear Track Recorder?

Wu-Hear is a simple yet efficient application for recording online audio streams. The app allows you to easily record audio streams from your favorite media players while supporting up to 5 concurrent streams. You can even set your preferences so as to isolate each of the recorded tracks while, optionally, allowing you to cut out the ones you do not want. Furthermore, it is a lightweight and efficient application, which does not overuse system resources, thus saving you from a wasted machine performance. Supports up to 5 concurrent streams recording To start capturing an audio stream, you are simply required to open the application. You can do so by clicking on the green icon in the lower right corner of your screen (see image below). Shortcut for configuring your recording preferences After starting the application, you can go to its configuration window by right-clicking on its icon. You are required to choose among several settings options before being able to start capturing a stream. Powerful and simple recording controller The application allows you to easily start recording an audio stream by clicking either the "Start" or the "Stop" buttons. It features a simple user interface that leaves the configuration controls in the bottom of the screen. You can even stop your recording by simply clicking on the "Split" button while playing the stream. You can then listen to your newly created audio track by opening it in your media player of choice. Supports multiple, optional output formats and bit rate profiles You can record the audio stream by clicking either the "Record" or the "Split Now!" buttons. The application offers several output formats and quality profiles that you can choose from. These include MP3, WAV, OGG, AAC, and AAC+, among others. You can also choose between a variety of encoding rates while opting for the optional M3U playlist output format. Reliable and lightweight Wu-Hear is a cross-platform application that does not need additional installation. Its interface is simple, clean, and minimalistic. It works efficiently and saves resources without messing up your computer. The application is 100% safe and does not harm your device in any way. What-U-Hear Download URL:
